

Who are you?

"We are we, as you are we, as they are we, and we are all together ..."
- Old Flatop

Actually, Who Are We TV is a non-profit (not by choice) webTV network, dedicated to bringing unique and original programming to the world wide web.

What's going on with "The Even Later Show"? Have you cancelled it from your Network? Is it true that Johnny Alan has left the show to pursue other interests?

The Even Later Show has not been cancelled and will return very shortly to our lineup. As far as Johnny Alan is concerned, all we can say right now is that he is taking a short sabbatical and we are in constant communication with him. We are all (Johnny Alan included) committed to the show and you can look forward to many fine episodes of "The Even Later Show" in the near future.

Why did you put photos of of the Who Are We TV staff in the clouds?

We give up! Why?

Why are all of the shows at Who Are We TV so much better than all the other so-called WEFTV shows out there?

To end up with material as great as ours, It's a much more complex process than most lay people would imagine.

All our shows and episodes start out in one of our writers minds as just a thought, which he/she then develops into a notion. From there it's worked it into a premise and finally fleshed out into an idea. This idea is then brought into our "creative conference room" where our team of professionals transform it into a full fledged concept. Once it's finally a become a concept, we begin our "patented brainstorming process" to bring it through many stages from a raw treatment, then tentative treatise, to a beginning sketch, then onto a preliminary first rough draft, second draft, intermediate draft, and ultimately "the final draft". From here we do a series of 100 or more rewrites at which point we usually throw the whole thing out and start completely over....

How do you make money at the WAWTV network if you are commercial free and don't run any ads at all on your website?

Thank you for asking such an thoughtful, intelligent and important question. We make all our money through your generous donations (see contribute now) and through selling items from the WAWTV store (see buy stuff). We encourage you to donate or purchase items so we can continue to bring you the high quality programs you have come to expect from Who are We TV.

Are you guys just making these questions up to look more important so we will donate money and buy stuff?

Of course not! If we were, would we ask ourselves such a question?

What is the symbolism of the WAWTV in space being carried by flying space-turtles with Atlas on their backs holding up the TV? Why is there an eye in the nebula? Who is that hanging behind the TV? Where is the TV going? What were you trying to say with the strange "somewhere else page"? Why is the enter button in the middle of the eye?

First off this is simply just too many questions. We'd like it if you would please just stick to our format here which is: one question one answer. Secondly we create high art. We don't feel a need to explain it. You don't see anyone asking Dali why his clocks were melting or Escher why his staircases go to nowhere.

Are you comparing your website main page with the timeless masterpieces of Dali & Escher?

Again we create art. We're not in the business of comparisons. We leave that job to the talentless critics of the world. But since you mentioned it. Someone has to carry on the legacy.

Does FAQ stand for "Frequently Asked Questions or, in the case of this this website, is it really an acronym for "Fictitiously Arranged Questions"?

Hey look here! We have addressed this ridiculous question with a very clear and concise answer earlier! We will not indulge you with a response as we refuse to continue to offer explanations about this fictitious subject again. You should read things a little more carefully in the future. We're
